

DALRADIAN, SUPPORTING THE COMMUNITY IN TYRONE

Since taking over the Curraghinalt Project in 2009, Dalradian has been proud to support local community groups in Tyrone.

As part of our Tyrone Fund, we have donated almost £500,000 to groups engaged in fantastic work across arts, sports, education and the environment, to name a few.

The work that these groups undertake helps support their communities by providing arts programmes, sporting activities and helping preserve the local environment. This community work helps make Tyrone the place that it is.

We know that the funding we provide pales in significance to the amazing work undertaken by the volunteers who often staff these organisations.

But we are proud to support the community in Tyrone and will continue to do so.

“ Operations of this scale generate significant community funds – in this case the proposal is for a £4m fund across the life of the mine. The social, sporting and community organisations that stand to benefit from this project are the life-blood of their local communities but are increasingly challenged by legislative and governance demands. A fund of the scale proposed has the potential to significantly help these organisations tackle these challenges. ”

Malachy McAleer,
former CEO of South West College and voluntary member of the Tyrone Fund committee.
